

ABSTRACT

A system for identification of animals. The system includes an animal identification device adapted for application to an animal and a device for secure storage of organic material taken from the animal to be identified by the identification device. The storage device and identification device each are marked with a common identifier. The identification device and the storage device are mounted, prior to use, in a holder which can be in the form of a moulded tray.